UTC Adopts Tougher Entry Standards

On July 9, the commission adopted stricter guidelines for new applicants seeking authority to provide residential moves in Washington. Some of the new requirements include: mandatory criminal background checks; no convictions for certain felonies within the previous five years; a valid Washington driver’s license; enrollment in a drug and alcohol testing program; and owning or leasing proper equipment. The one-time permit application fee of $550 will remain the same. The changes were made to further protect the public from untrusted, unsafe, and unscrupulous moving companies, while allowing companies who are in good-standing with the commission to operate throughout the state.

Jay the Mover Denied Permanent Authority

On Aug. 8, the commission denied Edmonds-based Jay the Mover’s application for permanent authority following a suspension of his temporary permit after he threatened a customer and held her belongings hostage. The company’s owner, Jason Smith, also was penalized $2,000 for failing to disclose multiple criminal convictions on his permit application. Mr. Smith did not request a hearing contesting the suspension and permit denial. The commission entered a cease and desist order against Mr. Smith when his permit was suspended. He is no longer allowed to operate as a residential mover in the state.

Electronic Estimates Now OK Under Tariff 15-C

Changes to Tariff 15-C allowing the moving companies to use electronic estimates went into effect on July 13. Carriers may now use electronic devices to generate estimates for customers, provided all of the elements in Tariff 15-C, Item 85 are included in the software application. The elements applicable to a particular move, however, must appear on the final estimate form. This allows carriers to customize estimates for each customer, while still complying with commission rules and Tariff 15-C.

Industry Proposes Changes to Tariff 15-C

On July 27, the Washington Movers Conference filed a petition to revise Tariff 15-C, proposing to incorporate language related to the use of electronic estimates, requiring use of a specific Table of Measurements form, and making changes to required contract language on the bill of lading. The changes will be considered at the commission’s open meeting on Sept. 27 in Olympia.

Upcoming Industry Training

The next free training for household goods moving companies is coming up soon. It is scheduled from 8:15 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 10, in Olympia at the commission headquaters building. The course is required for carriers to receive permanent authority. To register online, click here. If you have questions, email Mat Parkinson or call him at (360) 664-1105.
